

Supplementary Materials

Evaluation of Grafting Method and Scion—Rootstock Alignment Effects on Anatomical Development and Hydraulic Properties of Grapevine (Vitis vinifera L.) Graft Unions

Ana Villa-Llop<sup>1,2,3,*</sup>, Sara Crespo-Martínez<sup>2,3</sup>, Maite Loidi<sup>3</sup>, Ana Pina<sup>4,5</sup>, Patricia Irisarri<sup>4,5</sup> and Luis Gonzaga Santesteban<sup>2,3</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Vitis Navarra Nursery, 31251 Larraga, Spain

<sup>2</sup> Institute for Multidisciplinary Research in Applied Biology (IMAB-UPNA), Public University of Navarre, Campus Arrosadia, 31006 Pamplona, Spain

<sup>3</sup> Departament of Agronomy, Biotechnology and Food Science, Public University of Navarre, 31006 Pamplona, Spain

<sup>4</sup> Centro de Investigación y Tecnología Agroalimentaria de Aragón (CITA), Departamento de Ciencia Vegetal, Avenida Montañana 930, 50059 Zaragoza, Spain

<sup>5</sup> Instituto Agroalimentario de Aragón-IA2, CITA-Universidad de Zaragoza, 50013 Zaragoza, Spain

* Correspondence: ana.villa@unavarra.es

How To Cite: Villa-Llop A, Crespo-Martínez SC, Loidi M, Pina A, Irisarri P, & Santesteban LG. Evaluation of Grafting Method and Scion—Rootstock Alignment Effects on Anatomical Development and Hydraulic Properties of Grapevine (Vitis vinifera L.) Graft Unions. Plant Ecophysiology 2026, 2(1), 2. <https://doi.org/10.53941/plantecophys.2026.100002>

Figure S1. Plants before entering the stratification chamber (A) and after completion of the stratification period, showing callus formation at the graft union (B).